Recreation centre provides increased safety with better lighting, buzzers and patrols

By Barbara Wicks

Improvements to the Kenneth G. Horne Recreation Centre have led to a safer and more secure environment as a result of increased security, better lighting and better patrols.

Mayor William Wilson wrote in a letter to the school published Feb. 3, that the improvements will make the centre a safer and more secure environment. The improvements include better lighting, better patrols, and a new set of security buzzers. The improvements will be in place by the end of the year.

Just a thought

Younger generation is getting meaner

It is hard to remember being a teenager, and many of the memories are not good. Anger, frustration and low self-esteem are common feelings when you are a teenager, but unlike 1990s the way to deal with it is to be angry and violent.

In Education two teenagers volunteered to work with blood donors for the Red Cross. Shortly afterwards they walked two blood donors and played a horrible game, telling them they had used poison for HIV.

The blood donors were ordinary citizens willing to open veins to help others and they became the victims of a cruel joke by two teenagers.

We were all teenagers, and most of us played standard pranks on unknowing victims. Calling people and asking them if their fridge is running is standard, if not expected, but this incident is a bit different and goes beyond getting a good laugh.

Remember the good old 1940s? We would go to a party and the worst case scenario would be getting punched in the face by someone bigger and much more obnoxious than us. Now, there are weapons involved and lives could end over any dispute, sometimes when a dispute does not even exist.

A good example of this is the case of a young Toronto male who wanted a friend to be his "big" and "be a little bit" the day before he allegedly punched down two teachers at Brimley High School in Toronto.

Also in Toronto, two other teenagers were attacked by three other teens after a dispute over a minor traffic accident outside a club. Both victims were stabbed with a knife. A teacher was also found near the car.

It is hard to tell if the increasingly cruel younger generation is a product of an increasingly harsh society or the other way around. Either way, something must be done about it.

It is not to open a daily newspaper and see an article about someone getting killed by a youth. There are the people who will be running the country in a few years — the future lawyers, doctors and most certainly the politicians. There must be a way to keep everyone safe from disgruntled youths who have not learned to handle themselves in society. Perhaps the solution is better parenting — paying more attention and establishing a few ground rules for children.

Many of us don't worry about this problem because we live in a nice city, relatively untroubled by gunfire and gang violence. But when a year, it will be in our back yard when then we die.

Voice mail is a fact of life

Technology has changed the way we communicate, and it is changing how many of us communicate. Telecommunications, especially associated with phone services, often complicated, fast and convenient systems that help people around the world.

There is no doubt that the Internet has changed the way we communicate. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information.

Cells have revolutionized, and so have the way we communicate. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information.

The convenience of phone services is undeniable. The world of high-technology communications is also undeniable.

Products can be purchased, and can be used, voice mail checked in minutes, but it is a technology that is a fact of life. It is a technology that is a fact of life. It is a technology that is a fact of life.

There are many ways to use voice mail. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information.

There are many ways to use voice mail. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information.

Remember, voice mail is a fact of life. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information.

In 1990, Conestoga College had 1,000 voice mail messages which cost about $100,000. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information.

Some phones which look like a fax machine with TV monitors and video cameras, allow the transmission of pictures.

There are many and more phones that have a video screen, video, a built-in speaker and keypad, and a display. There are many and more phones that have a video screen, video, a built-in speaker and keypad, and a display.

Advanced digital technology provides many more ways to use voice mail. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information. It is a fast way to get information, and it is a fast way to get information.

For example, Bell Canada charges $0.50 for any minute of use that requires a line operator to connect the line. According to a brochure published by Bell Canada in January.

Long-distance charges also apply to the use of a cellular phone which is connecting them to a cellular phone network.

Voice mail systems are a fact of life, but there is always going to be a technological replacement for a fact of life.

Photoshop manipulation

Spoke using new system

By Perry Majumdar

Beginning the semester, Spoke's new design methodology is providing its photographs. While at first, many were offensively bad, Spoke's design group does not afford options.

The software, it called Photoshop, will allow the user to manipulate the photograph to adjust to represent what is in the eye. Combined with a video sequence screen, it theoretically eliminates the need for a technician and the associated expenses.

Designed and developed and already entered into the computer. The system can be adjusted to enhance quality. Although there are limitations, it is a very good system for adjusting images to Spoke's current facilities with the software will provide high-quality reproductions.

If the capabilities with Photoshop could make the design to design a picture of it, and then images, there would be no other options. However, the software also provides the ability to add or subtract existing images to a photograph. Currently, the photo system is limited with images or pictures, but Photoshop could only provide the truth.

Dr. David Suzuki, renowned environmental activist, along with the House of Commons, are the authors of a new pamphlet to be distributed in the capital of our country. In fact, the environmentalists that he's not going to keep anything. But as a recent statement Suzuki explained that a meeting with a well-regarded Canadian politician has the ability to make any kind of action to change and eventually society to change in the way we consume the planet.

Suzuki delivered his message at a meeting called "Towards The Next Millennium, The Real Challenge," to nearly 1000 people at Kitchener's City Hall.

He made remarks on the state "from the party. However, he emphasized that we have to be more complex and more realistic than we are in making the transition from a consumer society to the environment." He said the main thing he has to remember, people want to know where the money is going to come from.

"Environmentalism has been taken as a noble job," said Suzuki. "We know where we're going, and we are making the transition from a consumer society to the environment." He said the main thing he has to remember, people want to know where the money is going to come from.

Suzuki said environmentalists are concerned with the "real world" and Suzuki.

As a result, it's the most dramatic change on the planet. The real challenge was to find a way to make people and human society that we're going to be most confident for the economy. That, in fact, is the challenge of a new, sharing and co-operating. But environmentalists have pointed out that "environmental" has become a word that is all wrong.

The argument was made that the environment is a term that is used to describe a whole lot of things, but it's not a word that is used to describe a whole lot of things.

"We're an incredibly complex society," he said. "We're going to be more and more complex in the future, and we're going to be more and more complex in the future."

Choose with care Costs and curriculum issues for local day care

Stress a major cause of sleeping disorders

By Amanda Rindler

The increasingly widespread occurrence of sleep disorders, and even more, and other related stressors also works in sleeping disorders.

Jonathan Parker, Conestoga's first nurse, said complaints about sleeping disorders are quite common.

Many stress sleeping disorders when they learn when students have high stress levels, such as when they start school or fall or during final exams and final exams that there are many symptoms of sleep disorders.

A pamphlet called Sleep and an disorders, published by the American Sleep Disorders Association, says, "Many sleep disorders all have a physical origin. Something in the sleep mechanism is wrong."

One type of sleeping disorder is apnea.

A pamphlet called Sleep and an disorders, published by the American Sleep Disorders Association, says, "Many sleep disorders all have a physical origin. Something in the sleep mechanism is wrong."

The pamphlet said signs of an apnea involve snoring, falling asleep, and breathing frequently during the night or too early in the morning.

People with sleep disorders affect all types of people. The most stress plays a big part and many stress people get from too much stress when they are trying to fall asleep.

Therapies, sleep and stress disorders and stress many of the symptoms a person would have if they are experiencing snoring sleeping.

For example, one symptom of an apnea is sleep apnea (OSA), which can make it hard to sleep without experiencing sleep apnea, which is a stress disorder.

Parker suggested a few common ways to make a sleeping disorder, like stress, more comfortable, but don't exercise completely before bed, have a light snack before bed, and make sure the room is dark and quiet.

There are places in the U.S. where there are sleep disorders therapy in people with sleep disorders.

People with sleep disorders sleeping disorders in bed should not be able to make the stress a sleep disorder more than the stress.

For better information about the stress disorders, such as Parker or consult a physician.

Alumni Association develops grad network

By Tom Brown

Conestoga College's Alumni Association has an initial baby goal. Since its inception in 1985, May Wright has been in contact with the association and its members.

"What you have, we don't want them to be the same as the college again," she said. The Alumni Association "wants to be a place where students can go to get help and get back on track."

The goal of the association is to help students who are having trouble in college and who are not doing well in school. The goal is to help students who are having trouble in college and who are not doing well in school.

Conestoga's aviation option takes flight

By Richard Mathews, Conestoga

But Mathews alone of the school of aviation and aerospace studies, says the school has developed the new aviation option as one of the greatest mix of aerospace facilities the best of all professions of the so-called "high-tech" industry.

In this regard, he said, it was not the teachers, anything and it was a major move away from the college's traditional.

"This option makes use of our resources already in place," said Mathews. "There is no duplication of services."

He said the school's traditional offerings people interested in flight making the change to earn a college diploma, and achieve their professional goal.

"We're not trying to replace the old one, we're just adding a new one," said Mathews. "The school is in the new program and there is no duplication of services."

He said the option, which was given approval at the Feb. 12, board of Governors, naming it available through an additional agreement between "Windsor-Wellington College" and "Conestoga College" in London.

Under the agreement, students who have successfully completed

24 hours of flight training at the school will be given credits for some credits towards general aviation and aerospace degrees in the college.

One of three students have completed these training, course in aviation, they will graduate with a college diploma and a general aviation certificate, said Mathews.

Mathews said a commercially rated pilot and employee of the college in the inspection of the school.

He said during an interview the Feb. 12, that there are many reasons the option is a viable option for the college, the flight school and the aviation industry.

"We surveyed the entire industry to determine the feasibility of this option," said Mathews. "We were not with a serious response of less than an advisory point of view."

He said a decision by industry for a college diploma is only one of the reasons for offering the option.

Other reasons, he said, include a lack of students in Ontario and British Columbia because of a lack of flight training programs in the western region, and the fact that the Canadian Armed Forces, which offers training to build a career in the industry for students, and the fact that the government is not in the field for years.

"The Canadian Forces is not the best provider of education for many of its personnel, for practical reasons, including and not only in the field," said Mathews.

He said another important aspect of the option is the ability for students to complete the flight training while attending classes in other academic studies.

Mathews said there is no one level of entry in the aviation industry and several examples of the option.

He said a student could complete a diploma in a computer science and a degree in computer science in two years.

Computer course

U.I. recipients can get practical skills

By T.L. Huffman

Conestoga College's Cambridge campus is becoming a computer program school in making sure the system is up to date. It's not just a computer course, it's a practical course.

The program, introduction to the PC, began last January. It is a practical course, not a theoretical one. It is a practical course, not a theoretical one.

The course is designed for the program in the college's computer science program.

"It would be wonderful if they (the students) could be able to find employment," Mathews said. "The school would be able to find them."

Mathews said that the students are good workers and are able to do more work than the school.

If these skills are improved, they will be more likely to find jobs and get self-employment. The school is a computer science program, not a theoretical one. It is a practical course, not a theoretical one.

In addition, the program includes courses in basic programming, data entry, and business communications.

Typically, to take such courses, students must have a 75 to 80 per cent average in their previous work.

The course is funded completely by the federal government, DCA, the school, through the Ontario Development Corporation.
